of fighting blood once up, attached a fourth bearing down on him with a broad blade that would have split a man in two at a single blow. He saw, but in his preoccupation with the adversary before him, his mind, as it were, failed to grasp the other danger.

In another moment it would have been too late, but just in that one undecided moment a dark figure sprang between them, sprang like a wildcat at the tall warrior's throat, and with round the neck, and hanging clinging there till he reeled under her weight, dropping his spear, gasping, choking, trying in vain to shake her off, for all the life and strength of her body seemed to have gone into the grasp of those long hands.

Oliphant, hard pressed by the three yet unwounded ones, makes a drive with his spear, it breaks off short in his hand after transfixing one. Well, as well first as last!

"Bwana! Bwana! Here is your gun!" Oliphant thrusts it loaded into his hands and lays about him with the butt end of his own. One or two shots scatter those still able to flee. Three are left on the ground, two dead—the other? Oliphant coolly delivers a smashing blow on his head and frees Karenga's arms from his grasp. She tries to rise, but sinks down again all huddled up on the rocky ground.

"Poor soul," says Oliphant softly to himself, "I do believe she saved my life."

She lifted her glaring eyes to him.

"I am dead. Tell the white chief he is good, he has a heart."

"Poor thing, poor thing!" She saw he was speaking words of pity, and she caught his hand in her feeble grasp and laid her cheek against it.

"What does she say, Oli?"

"She wants to know if she will go to the white man's land now?"

Oliphant felt helpless and perplexed. His mother knew how to comfort poor souls like this. If she had only been in his place, and those wild, hollow eyes fixed so pleadingly on his.

"Tell her, Oli," he said, choking down something very like a sob, "tell her she is going to die, and he loves us all, loves white and black alike, and no one will be cruel to her any more."

I do not know whether Oli interpreted faithfully or whether she understood. Her eyes still rested on his face with a wistful, loving look like that of a dog; she smiled a little and stretched out her feet and was gone.

Oliphant took up the poor body—he could not leave to leave it there in the track—and laid it, with Oli's help, in a deep cavity among the rocks of a tree that was better than a grave at all. And then they looked at each other with sad, hopeless eyes, and went on together through that horrible wilderness.

For the reader's satisfaction I may add that Oliphant reached Bantala in safety, along with Oli and Feraigi, and that all three are at the present day alive and well, and distinguishing themselves in the service of the King of the Congo—A. Werner in Longman's Magazine.

NEWSY NOTES.

The temperance women of London have succeeded in getting peace motions appointed for all the stations in that great city.

The city is to put the sauce.

Miss Rose E. Cleveland has become the owner of an orange grove in Florida, and has just returned from there after a two-months' sojourn, delighted with the country and her prospects.

William L. Bright is thinking of retiring from Parliament to devote himself to book work, in which he is enormously successful. He is the only one of John Bright's sons who made his father's career one of success.

A large force of idle people in St. Peterburg will be given work in an immense new theatre which is to be built on the Field of Mars. It is approved of by the Czar and is to cost $1,200,000, or something less than $1,000,000.

The fishermen of the herring fishery at Ardross, in the North of Ireland, hardly ever sleep in a bed during the season. When they are not in their boats they lie sleeping about the docks. Their earnings are very precarious.

A large number of people round the coast of the County Antrim live by burning kail, or kelp, as it is called, for glass manufacture, and this has grown to be a large industry.

The seaweed is packed in little stone kilns which are lighted, and when it begins to smoke more is piled on until the whole fuses into a black mass resembling coal. This is sold to the glass manufacturers, and is the base of the alkaline constituents of the glass.

Which is the Worse Boy?

"Johnny, Johnny?"

"What, ma?"

"March yourself into the house. I thought I told you not to play with that bad boy."

"I wasn't playing with him, ma. I knocked an eye out of him."

Flush Times, But Not Flush Times.

"That was a perfectly lovely suit you wore Easter Sunday, Tillie. It must have cost you a penny or two."

"It did, indeed. But I happened to be flush when I bought it. I'd just got my salary."

The wives and mothers carry the world on their shoulders. They must not only be their own keepers in matters of health and virtue, but they have been made in a large measure responsible for that of their husbands and sons. If a woman cannot control three or four destinies she thinks she is a failure, and her shoulders begin to droop, she begins to look old, and the clouds rarely lift again. Two if she adds to other disasters the sin of being a mother.

The tragedy of life seems to be complete in her. In the circle in which she moves the poor encouragement of a sham praise is not given often; she was never very sure that even her simple usefulness was appreciated, though she ministered self-quietude enough now and then to make it her own warrant for staying amongst us. But that was when she was younger. She is old now, and even the excuse for living is taken from her. If she could be placed into the Ganges as a propitiation for her children's sins, she might comfort herself with the thought that she still has a value. But we have passed that age of the world, and that stream of old women, and we have not reached a better day yet.

Still to the Front

For the information of Customers and Friends, I wish to announce that although I did not get the P. M. & C. Stock at the recent sale, it having sold for more than I considered it worth, I have succeeded in making arrangements for an

and have leased the NEW STORE now being erected on the Site recently occupied by Mr. John A. Brown, will go east at once to select New Stock, which will be here by 15th September, when the new store is to be completed.

Taking into consideration the "English fair play" extended to me in the past, and the fact that we will not have a single dollar's worth of OLD STUFF to work off, but selected for this season's trade, we expect, by strict attention to business, good value, and strictly honest dealing, to secure a fair share of public patronage.

The friends of Mr. Robertson and Mr. Cox will probably find them with us in our New Store.

Remember the date, 15th of September, and give us an early look through.

Yours faithfully,

PAISLEY.
